Economic opportunity offers incentive to women to finish education.

More economic opportunities deters women from turning to prostitution to survive.

Designated resources for women’s health improves prevention and treatment rates.

Promotes early testing and prevention.

Promotes higher self esteem.

Opens doors to employment.

More economic opportunities deters women from turning to prostitution to survive.

When women are not completely reliant on finances of partner, they have more incentive to leave unhealthy relationships.

Designated resources for women’s health improves prevention and treatment rates.

Economic opportunity offers incentive to women to finish education.

More males taking caretaker roles lessens burden on women.

Men are encouraged to have less risky sexual encounters.

When men view women as equal partners, domestic violence decreases.